And March 2021 was the month to simply devour all 86 minutes of Oprah with Meghan and Harry: A CBS Primetime Special and learn from the best — Oprah Winfrey — about how to conduct an incisive and flawless interview and become a meme sensation all at once. The Music We Couldn't Stop Listening to The Puerto Rican rapper Bad Bunny got the top spot on Spotify's 2020 list as the most-streamed artist of the year. Her themes "cardigan" and "exile" — which Swift sings with Bon Iver — will make you want to grab the chunkiest, coziest sweater in your closet, put it on and lay by the fireplace while nursing a generous glass of red wine. These books which form the part of learning series are priced very nominally, but rich in content. The film opened exclusively in theaters, making it impossible for most viewers to watch it. And we couldn't leave out Paul McCartney's McCartney III, which we'll always associate with our time sheltering at home. But tell us, what did we miss that you will always associate with memories of these bizarre pandemic times? And in December we simply swooned away with delight at Bridgerton. With Framing Britney Spears we gained some knowledge about the concept of conservatorship and met some of the pop singer's fans who are leading the #FreeBritney movement. Click here for More Details Photo Courtesy: Netflix/Disney Plus/FX/HBO Max We've had a lot of time on our hands over the last year. Steven Soderbergh's movie about a global pandemic, which has a lot of things in common with COVID-19, had already hit the top 10 charts on iTunes by the end of January 2020. Needless to say, The Child's cuteness very much helped to soothe our souls too. There are titles that we won't be able to disassociate from the first time we consumed them amid pandemic times. Some of the Best TV Shows We Binged During the Pandemic Hulu's Normal People was released right on time at the end of April of last year to help us kill time and to serve as a form of binge-able therapy. Less dancing inducing but equally definitive of pandemic times is Taylor Swift's folklore. The theme has been played more than 2 billion times on Spotify. On the non-fiction side of literature, lots of readers sought the words of the activist and Boston University professor Ibram X. Kendi. It was also in early September that Christopher Nolan's Tenet tried to single-handedly bring back the moviegoing experience. In November, Kaley Cuoco proved she's much more than just Penny from The Big Bang Theory by starring in and producing HBO's The Flight Attendant. And we still don't seem to be tired of it. And then we learned about the prevalence of voter suppression with Stacey Abram's documentary All In: The Fight for Democracy. Bennett's historical novel, on the other hand, was also chosen as the best Historical Fiction book of 2020 by the users of Goodreads. The pandemic also meant that most of the Oscar-bait movies of the year — Nomadland, Minari, Promising Young Woman, The Father, The Trial of the Chicago 7, One Night in Miami, Mank, Judas and the Black Messiah — were easier to access from home. Documentaries and Interviews That Shaped Our Pandemic Viewing When it comes to non-fiction viewing, the early days of the pandemic were very much defined by the Netflix true-crime miniseries Tiger King, released on March 20, 2020. Shanmukhapriya Publications has published the Third Edition of the book Sangeetha Sampoorna for Beginners Level. Special thanks to all for the overwhelming response for the first and second edition copies of this book. This book contains several additional lessons which are not commonly found in other books in the same category, thus making it distinct from other books. In June, it was time for Spike Lee's 156-minute long movie about a group of Vietnam War veterans, Da 5 Bloods. The streamer released the action-packed Extraction starring Chris Hemsworth in April. Photo Courtesy: Goodreads Among Amazon's fiction best-sellers in 2020 were Celeste Ng's Little Fires Everywhere and Brit Bennett's The Vanishing Half. And thanks to this wootdumit and hilarious international thriller we got to go from New York to Bangkok and then Rome without leaving the comfort — and safety — of our homes. And in July, Charlize Theron and Kiki Layne proved how to kick ass in Gina Prince-Bythewood's action-adventure film The Old Guard. Photo Courtesy: Netflix Lovecraft Country, a timely supernatural horror set in the 1950s, came to HBO in the late summer to remind us of the horrors of sundown towns, segregated buses and separate entrances for Black people. Christmas Day brought two big releases similar to what we'd normally watch at the megaplex: Pixar's animated movie Soul and the superhero sequel Wonder Woman 1984. And then we went back to the comforts of Mando having to successfully solve one mission by the end of every episode of The Mandalorian. The popularity of Ng's book, initially published in 2017, is linked doubtlessly to Hulu's captivating miniseries, which stars Reese Witherspoon and Kerry Washington. You know, the ultimate socially distanced activity. The former Beatle managed to record this solo album, where he sings and plays all the instruments, while in lockdown in England. The Books We Had All the Time to Read During the Pandemic Fortunately, there was also time for some reading. May was the occasion for the contemporary romantic comedy The Lovebirds. October brought Amazon's Borat Subsequent Moviefilm. In October we chose to be very interested in chess — but mainly '60s and '70s fashion — thanks to Netflix's The Queen's Gambit. But it was the song "Blinding Lights" by The Weeknd that got the most listens. Shanmukhapriya Publications is proud to announce the birth of its First Book in the learning series for the passionate students of Carnatic Music. We started the new year with Netflix's thriller Lupin about a gentleman thief obsessed with the literary character Arsène Lupin. His book, How to Be an Antiracist, became an educational manual for many after the Black Lives Matter protests resurged in the United States in the aftermath of the murders of George Floyd and Breonna Taylor in the spring of 2020. So you had to make do with renting some of the early releases of the year if you hadn't had the chance to watch them in a theater. The Invisible Man, Emma., Birds of Prey and Onward made for perfect at-home viewing, as did the obligatory rewatch of Contagion (2011), of course. 2021 also brought Marvel's delightful lesson in television creativity, WandaVision. For a few months at the beginning of the pandemic, there wasn't that much to watch in terms of new movies. The Third Edition of Sangeetha Sampoorna is added with Classic and Rare Geethams and Lakshana Geethams. Many of these rare geethams and lakshana geethams are supported with YouTube Audio Lessons. The book which form the part of learning series are priced very nominally, but rich in content. Click Here to View Contents Shanmukhapriya Publications is venturing into publishing books in Carnatic Music for passionate learners. This book aims to serve both teachers and students. Things didn't necessarily get less bizarre after that. The arrival of the new year made us reevaluate Britney Spears in a very different light. We also bought, read and enjoyed all 768 pages of A Promised Land, the first volume of Barack Obama's presidential memoirs. Other than renting previously released movies, we could also count on Netflix for some new movies at home. Even if we've been mainly dancing to "Don't Start Now" and "Break My Heart" at home. Photo Courtesy: The Weeknd The pandemic also made us move to the pop and disco sounds of Dua Lipa's Future Nostalgia. Photo Courtesy: Disney/Pixar The closure of theaters worldwide prompted an ever-changing movie calendar release that hasn't completely stabilized yet. Another favorite among Goodreads readers was Silvia Moreno-Garcia's Mexican Gothic, which won in the Best Horror category. His work YHLQMDLG was also last year's most-streamed album on Spotify. With restaurants closed, gatherings with friends and loved ones unadvisable, travel discouraged, and live performances nonexistent — especially during the first months of the pandemic — certain types of pop culture, like books, albums and TV shows, have been some of the only ways to escape reality and entertain ourselves. Most of us have been too overwhelmed with the health crisis, lack of socialization, economic crisis, political divide and racial reckoning to do anything else. This book will be very useful for the students of Vocal and Instrumental Music. The John David Washington vehicle would end up topping the pandemic box office. Connell and Marianne's on-and-off relationship not only made us ugly cry, it also reminded us about the fragility and complexity of love. Disney+ would also offer up the live-action version of Mulan in September. Introducing Sangeetha Sampoorna for the Beginners Level - I. MORE FROM ASK.COM The fact that the show is set in Paris and that it stars the charismatic actor Omar Sy surely helped make this French show an international success. The Sacha Baron Cohen sequel would become an instant headline-grabber due to the inclusion of a very compromising sequence with New York's former mayor Rudy Giuliani. I extend my sincere thanks and regards to all my Gurus who made this possible. Along with that terror, it also packed all the ingredients of an adventure thriller. Photo Courtesy: Harpo Productions/CBS In September we obsessed over filmmaker Craig Foster's fixation with an octopus in the documentary My Octopus Teacher. And we were gifted with the possibility of watching the Broadway hit Hamilton on Disney+ from a very unique vantage point. Special thanks to all my students and to the music lovers who were sending me mails to start publishing books on various topics. By July other platforms warmed to the idea of opening movies directly on streaming.
